

Planning An All Inclusive Honeymoon

Contributed by Andrew Bicknell
Wednesday, 28 March 2007

When two people decide to tie the knot and start planning their wedding many times the post wedding honeymoon gets sort of forgotten. It's rather easy to see why this can happen because planning a great wedding takes time and can be one of the most stressful events of anyone's life. Just finding the time and energy to put together a honeymoon can be taxing. When you think about it though, you come to realize that after all the work and stress of putting a wedding together that nothing would be better then on or two weeks away from everything with your new spouse. For those who are pressed for time when it comes to planning their special vacation after the wedding an all inclusive honeymoon package may be the perfect solution for their needs.

Why is an all inclusive honeymoon a good idea for those who are pressed for time? It's got everything you need in a one price package. Once you have the package picked out and paid for you are done, all that's left to do is get married and then enjoy your week or two of romantic bliss with your newly minted spouse.

If you are looking for a romantic and relaxing honeymoon then an all inclusive honeymoon will have everything you need. You may need to make separate travel arrangements if the package does not offer them but this is easy to do with any internet travel service or contact your local travel agent.

An all inclusive hotel or resort will offer a base honeymoon package at a specified price that will include room, board and a meal plan. From this base package the soon to be newlyweds can add other amenities to their package which will add to the over all price. If, for example, you choose to honeymoon at an all inclusive beach resort the package you choose may include a suite with an ocean view, unlimited meals at their dining facilities, private beach access and unlimited access to any and all entertainment offered.

Chances are, depending on the resort or hotel you choose, you will have three or four all inclusive honeymoon packages to choose from. The final price of the package will depend on the amenities chosen. A cheaper package will offer a smaller room with a view of the pool while the more expensive packages will include a suite with an ocean view. For those resorts that offer a base package they will also offer a list of amenities and the additional cost those amenities will add to the base price. What you ultimately spend will depend on how the amenities offered fit into your overall honeymoon budget.

Make sure to read all the included information about your all inclusive honeymoon to avoid any confusion about what is and what isn't included in the package you are considering. Any questions you have need to be asked and answered before you make the reservation. You don't want to arrive at your resort destination and find the package you thought you were getting is not the package you are actually getting. The resort or hotel you are considering for your all inclusive honeymoon will usually be more than happy to answer any questions and help you choose the package that will make your honeymoon one to remember.

About the Author: For more information about planning an all inclusive honeymoon check out the website Honeymoon Destinations.