

Wedding Decorations

Contributed by Yehiel Carter
 Sunday, 08 July 2007
 Last Updated Sunday, 08 July 2007

You have waited for your wedding day your whole life. In your head you have it all planned out, the dress, the flowers, the decor and the vow. And now, finally when the big day is close on your heels you want everything to go right, everything to look stunning and the special day to breeze by like a dream.

To ensure that your wedding day is all that and more you will have to put in a lot of time and effort in the months preceding it. A number of plans have to be made, a number of decisions have to be taken. Deciding what your wedding decor will be is just one of them.

However, despite being just one of the very many nitty-gritty's of the wedding your wedding decorations is an important subject so spend good time deciding exactly how it's going to be. How you will decorate your wedding (that is the ceremony area and the reception hall) will depend on a lot of factors

a. The theme you will choose for wedding ? Whether you choose to have a special theme wedding or not there will have to be a theme according to which you will be deciding your wedding decor. The wedding needs to reflect you and your spouse to be and at the same time echo the general mood of the day. Decide if you want a fun party wedding or a traditional ceremony first and then go ahead and choose your colors and decorations.

b. The time of your wedding ? The time of the year that you choose to get married will always have a role to play in how you will decorate your wedding. Say for instance, an outdoor wedding during winter months in say Chicago would be an impossible idea. Thus planning a garden arrangement would be foolish. {niftybox width=300px,float=right}

Beautiful Wedding Decorations and Gifts on a Small Budget

From a nationally known wedding consultant comes a collection of clever, easy-to-do, and inexpensive ideas for parties, cherished gifts, and storybook weddings. Readers will find tips for stretching their decorating dollars, instructions for crafting exquisite wedding accessories (bouquets, garters, headpieces), creative ideas for gift baskets, cake toppers, and more. 71 illustrations.

Click to Order

{/niftybox} c. Site Wedding VS Idea Wedding ? Simply put, a site wedding is one where the wedding decor is primarily dependant on the location of the wedding itself. So if you have managed to arrange your ceremony in a medieval castle or a yacht you can decorate it keeping in mind the locale and the ambiance of the wedding site. On the other hand if your wedding is to be in an otherwise non-descript area (like say your backyard) you can concentrate on a certain specific theme (or idea) to make the area more interesting.

This will be what is called an idea wedding. A Hawaiian beach party theme, a wild west theme or a Classical theme can turn any boring backyard into a partying hotspot.

d. Budget ? Finally, your budget will decide exactly how you may or may not decorate your wedding. No point planning bouquets of imported flowers and swans and ice sculptures if your budget doesn't permit you anything more than a priest! However you choose to decorate your wedding do make sure that the ceremony space and the reception hall reflect what is after all intrinsic to the event ----- the lover's union. Romance, if not anything else ought to be one of the basic requisites of all weddings, however they are done up. And if you get no accessories to push up the romance quotient don't worry wear that special look in your eyes that says you are happy, that ought to do well enough.

-----
'About the author'

Yehiel Carter is an expert on wedding planning and etiquette. He can help you with anything related to planning your wedding, For more information and advice go to:

<http://www.bestweddinginstructor.com/bestweddingever>